Conclusion

Few studies of older adults consider built environments within and outside retirement villages, and this is one of the first to comprehensively assess environmental perceptions for both environments. Perceptions of the built environment within retirement villages and in the neighborhood surrounding villages were related to walking among residents of retirement villages.

Our findings suggest that locating retirement villages in neighborhoods with many destination types may encourage more walking among village residents than simply providing many services and facilities within retirement villages. Indeed, retirement villages rich with services and facilities may be “too” convenient and actually limit the amount of walking undertaken by residents. These findings have key implications for policy and practice, and highlight the importance of considering layout, design, and facilities of retirement villages alongside neighborhood attributes in which the village is located.
