Of paramount importance is the postmodern leader’s recognition of the numerous and diverse routes by which a college can arrive at defining its organizational self. A definite challenge for the postmodern college administrator is to avoid trying to control what that identity is, what it needs to be, and what it might become. Instead, the institutional leader needs to concentrate on perpetuating a hyperreality, derived from vision and mission, that cannot be destroyed by misguided interpretations of discourse, diminished by local narratives or dissolved by inept use of power. For the administrator and the leader within a postmodern institution, nothing is inherently stable -- not even the institutional hyperreality itself. The challenge then, is to: retain an unwavering commitment to reflexivity, champion an awareness that administrative autonomy is fundamentally imaginative, and to acknowledge that privilege is a product of respect earned from nurturing positive and beneficial relationships.
