6. Concluding remarks

Human capital accounting is essentially, the identification and recognition in specific terms, of the human value in organizational productivity. In the context of research and scholarship, it possesses multidisciplinary trajectories. In empirical terms, its import is contentious. Indeed, a literature review may not be an exhaustive documentation. However, it must highlight the essential aspects of the critical developments in the subject matter or topical issue. It must be authoritative enough to uncover the shortcomings of earlier studies and furthermore, show the strengths of the influential types of such previous researches. Invariably, a good literature review would chart a course for future investigations. In precise terms, a literature review of some significance is expected to expose the gaps in extant literature. It is principally from such gaps that further researches are framed. Consequently, this study has attempted to conform to the foregoing requirements of an impactful investigation. The study is concluded by stating that the empirical import of human capital (human resource accounting) will be difficult to convincingly establish and universally recognized. This study has further highlighted these difficulties and recommends that further investigations be continued from here, in strongly determining beyond alluring theorizations, the empirical importance of human capital accounting.
