4. Conclusion

1. The learning and competency management system performs its functions in competency management and development. Although some LCoMS elements were not implemented, the obtained results prove the opportunity for successfully using the offered solution for the purposes of employee selection and initial development. 2. Integration of LCoMS with external IS would form open system architecture that is required for obtaining extensive learning management analytical information. 3. Implementation of website functionality would provide for the closer involvement of customers in the use of LCoMS. 4. Further course of the study will involve the development of a system prototype and validation in real business environments.
